

TASA Health Day 2008

Title: The power of sociology in health and the health care professions

Aims:

Provides an opportunity to:

- articulate the positioning of sociology across medicine, health and society
- re-imagine what can be done with sociology across medicine, health and society
- explore the implications of working in multidisciplinary health environments

Tuesday 2nd December, 2008, 9.30am -4 pm

Venue: Multifunction Room, School of Graduate Research, 1888 Building, University of Melbourne

<http://www.pb.unimelb.edu.au/CampusMaps/Parkville.pdf>

Conveners: Priscilla Pyett, Deb Warr, Simon Kitto, Janice Chesters, Marilys Guillemin
For inquiries please contact Marilys Guillemin at m.guillemin@unimelb.edu.au

Time	Session
9.30-11	Mapping the power of sociology in health and the professions <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Priscilla Pyett & Deb Warr: Being central in the academy and working with marginalized populations• Simon Kitto: Being in the margins of medicine• Janice Chesters: Interprofessionalism and the power of sociology
11-11.30	Morning tea
11.30-1	Panel discussion: Re-imagining sociology across medicine, health and society <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Chair: Alan Petersen, Monash University• Panelists:<ul style="list-style-type: none">○ Fran Collyer, University of Sydney, and Editor of Health Sociology Review○ Nina Hallowell, University of Edinburgh○ Julia Lawton, University of Edinburgh○ Karen Willis, University of Tasmania
1-2	Lunch
2-4	Discussion: Re-imagining medical and health sociologies This will be small group discussions around a set of central questions followed by a large group discussion.